Concept Note

The Covid-19 pandemic has significantly changed the contours of professional and social life altering human life on many aspects. The pandemic forces everyone into imperative need to move the classroom to the virtual environment. This drastic and immediate change generates conflict, confusion, and anxiety among those involved. The physical presence of the students in the class has been under threat. Therefore, it is essential to encourage discussions and reflections on online practices and strategies. There are questions and confusions among teachers regarding moving from classroom teaching to the virtual space. The need of the hour is to think of teaching methods and models and paving a new way of imparting knowledge in the post-pandemic world. In this context the conference will lead discussions on ideas relating to use of various e-tools and platforms to teach English language and literature in virtual environment. The conference will cover subthemes like: e-contents development, available e-resource for online teaching, teaching English language and literature virtually, online techniques for teaching language and literature etc.
